The screenshot shows the ORCID registration interface. At the top, the ORCID logo is displayed. Below it, the text "Cineca HUB" is circled in red, with a question mark icon next to it. Below this, it says "has asked for the following access to your ORCID Record". Three icons represent the requested permissions: an eye (read record), an upward arrow (add person identifier), and a refresh icon (update works). A list of permissions follows: "Read your ORCID record", "Read your biographical information", "Add a person identifier", "Add works", and "Update your works". A checkbox is checked, indicating that the user allows the permission until it is revoked. Below this, a note states that the application cannot see the user's password or other private information.
